The Weather Does Not Affect the Attendance at Benning.

Charagence Wins the Steeplechase in a Drive-Large Fields in All the Events-Finishes Close and Exciting-Speculation Brisk - The Entries and Selections for Today

For the first time since the opening of the fall meeting of the Jockey Club at the Benning course, the "Weather Man" was unkind yesterday aftermoon and treated the faithful to the worst he had in stock Despite the raw, rainy weather, however, a crowd of about 2,000 sports witnessed the five evenus on the card for the cleventh. day, and were well rewarded. The track was not heavy as had been expected, and Uncle Lot fair time was made. All of the events were well contested by large fields and the fin-Ishes were close and exciting.

Nearly half of the twenty-eight book makers who "weighed in" were compelled to check off their lists by candle light dur-ing the aftersoon, and the sudden gusts of rate sent dry locations in the betting ring to a premium. Specialistic was heavy. however, and the palent captured the four races on the flat. The starts were all prompt and fetr and Starter Cassidy is making a reputation for his long "hunch" thusinem. A large number of the fair sex had braved the miserable outlook to see this event and they were well rewarded. There were nine starters and the race was run in a rain storm. Tentore set the pact for menty two miles and a quarter, when Charagrane gained in the stretch and won handlir. Berel was a very bed third, being a half down lengths behind the leaders. The Monon, ridden by Jockey Brown, and Ochiltree, with furfly up, both feil while jumping, but the riders were uninjured. The Monon's fall squashed the hopes of hundreds of local sports who had be heavily on the horse.

TIGERS READY FOR YALE

Finishing Touches of Practice Yesterday on Osborne Field.

The Signal Drills and Final Polish to Formation Receive Attention-Satisfaction of the Conches With the Condition and Work of the Team-They Leave for New Haven.

PRINCETON, Nov. 23.—The Tigers unded up the season as far as practice on Osborne Field is concerned this afternoon. The greater part of the practice was spent in running through signal drills and in putting a final polish on the formations. Five minutes before the close of the work the varsity lined up against a team composed of substitutes, and although no attempt was made to score by either side the scrimmage served to take the kinks out of the veterans' joints and to give the substilutes a test of the game.

The coaches made no attempt to conceal their entire satisfaction with the work ceal their entire satisfaction with the work of the eleven. Coach Langdon Lea refused to discuss at length the physical condition of the eleven, but he said that all the men were in fairly good shaps. However, it is well known here that several of the players have shown signs of going stale. There will be little surprise among the under-graduates if several of the substitutes get a charte for variety before the grace

The eleven with a small army of substi-iutes and rubbers will leave tomorrow afternoon at 4:05 o'clock for New York. Saturday morning special cars will be ready to take them to New Haven. Yale money has been more plentiful today, and several bets have been recorded, at odds of 5 to 3 on Yale. A large crowd of students with well lined pockets will leave for New York and New Haven tomorrow night, but despite the premising reports given out by the conches tonight it is the opinion here that Primeston men will be backward at that Princeton men will be backward at placing their money at more odds than 5 to 4 on Yale.

The wearers of the blue continue to rule favorite at odds of 5 to 3, but the Princeton supporters were not anxious to take the short end. Good judges say that the game is liable to resolve liself into a test of shorted condition and in this retest of physical condition, and in this re spect they believe that Yale will prove to be the superior.

The experience gained by the latter at Cambridge is expected to work to further advantage, for the men know what a hard game means, and have more confidence in their playing ability. Both teams are so strong in defence that several wagers were made today that the score would be 0 to But upon this proposition a flood of Yale money can be found, as the New Haven men are confident that they will

MAKING AN ARMY.

How Reserves Are Turned Into Regulars at Aldershot.

(From the London Leader. They are making an army at Aldershot, and making it with all the speed they can. It is an event which happens; them proof against enteric fever. The engineers were practicing with pontoons for bridge making. In the Wellington lines are excitangent throughout the world. Yet one could walk all over Aldershot de-pot half a dozen times and unless he knew the place intimately would come away with the firm impression that nothing unusual was proceeding.

I saw some statements to the effect that Aldershot was all bustle and excitement. It is not. They do not make an army like that. If you expect to see orderlies rushing about and soldiers on cycles whizzing past-well, that is not at Aldershot. But it is of a sort that you do not see There are officers tearing their hair, it ald because now that they have got the men ready and have to be off in a day or two they have got no clothing to put on them and cannot find out when it is likely to arrive, "It will be ready for the em-barkation," says Pimilco with passive calmness, and with that Aldershot has to The results of this are visible, though all the excitement is hidden beneath the rectape bands that hold "complaints." Some of the results make our soldiers look al-

The colonial helmets have arrived, great packing cases full of them, all stowed in-side one another, while the gilt adora-ments and chin straps are separate in other ments and chin straps are separate in outer rases. There is no stopping to fix them together and number the helmets. In-stend of that three sergeants play a little game of shop. Up marches a file of men in field caps. "Halt! Front turn! Answer-to your names. Right turn, march! Right turn, halt! Now, then, pick out a helmet and bury up!"

and hurry up!"

The file has drawn up in front of a line of open packing cases. The moment the men helt off comes each cap, and each man seizes a helmet and dabs it onto his head. Not one in six tries a second. Then a quartermaster tries one or two of the worst filing. A captain sees whether he quartermaster tries one of two of the worst fitting. A captain sees whether he can get a little more head of this man out of the helmet and a little more of that man's in. The quartermaster explains that each man must number his own. Then "Right turn, march!" again, and as they pass by the heaps put ready, each man picks up the gilt adornments and the chin strap, and goes off wondering how ever anything could be made so light as his new white helmet.

Meanwhile other files are passing, bearing old home kits to the stores. Each has an armful of tunies in one file. In another each man is loaded with leggins. Others are carrying away the old helmers. The reserve men are of course the great feature of interest just now. As to Alder-shot, they may be divided into two setsthose who came in alone direct to the de-pot, and those who marched in in large parties from other barracks. Bands and cheers always meet these big parties. But the great human interest after all, centred in the separate men. The others had got over their partings and leave-takings. These had only just come through the thick of it.

Once inside the camp the reserve man stands and twists his mustache in wonderment at the changes of recent years. The wilderness had become a town.

I came across one man who had just hurried back from Monte Carlo from the control of the control o

I came across on the large that have the hack from Monte Carlo from the service of a countess—and even he was not sorry. Every man seemed delighted with the chance of being in action.

But the reservint is not in the depot long before he has to fall in with some part of the movement for making an army. If his uniform has come he is served out with it, and with a sheet of brown paper, a label, and a bit of string. These last are for wrapping up all that is left of the civilian, if his uniform has not come, no matter; there is a rifle and a bayonet and belt handy, so off he goes to drill in his own civilian driess. Some of the reservists were drilling in morning cents, bowlers or alpine hale, and one man—a navyy—was still wearing the "yorks" holding up his trousers below the knee. During the first drill he took one of these straps off, so that he should be quite sure of not forgetting which was his right leg.

Then in little corners here and there one could see the making of an army going ahead. At the school men were getting refreshers in the art of signaling. At the hospital men were being dosed with injections of come patent supposed to make the gun carriages and wagons were being painted from the usual grey to a sort of drab like unto khaki.
